ONGOING RESEARCH WORK

Over the next few years my research/publication goals include the preparation of several book-length studies. One of these expands upon the work which I began in The People's Co-op. Essentially a broad-based study of Winnipeg's very active labour, left-wing, and other social movements, this project, tentatively entitled, Left-Wing Winnipeg: Shaping an Oppositional Consciousness, from Riel to Murray will examine the causes, consequences, and changing nature of popular radicalism in Winnipeg from the 1860s to the turn of the 21st Century.

The second major project also deals with the City of Winnipeg. This work focuses upon the inter-war period - a truly crucial era in Winnipeg's history. Wracked by the human losses associated with the "Great War" and the influenza epidemic of 1918-19, the economic losses associated with losing its monopoly over western Canadian markets and the psychological impact of playing host to North America's most dramatic and prolonged general strike, Winnipeg entered the "stuttering twenties" and the "traumatic thirties" already in dire straits. Within this context, Winnipeg will be examined as a "community of communities" - defined by geography, class, ethnicity and gender; communities which sought to cope with the crises of this period in unique fashions. (In relation to these first two book-length projects I am also writing a series of articles which come out of the research for these books, most notably a series of articles on W.J. Sisler and education in Winnipeg which have been published in Manitoba History, a projected series of articles on the Children's Home of Winnipeg and related child care institutions (this may well be turned into another book-length project), an article on the “Assiniboia Housing Scheme” and the attendant scandal in the years following the Great War, a piece on the economic and social status of women in the inter-war period, plus a series of articles on leading political and social activists in Winnipeg.)

In 2020 I published another book-length project with my co-author from Re-Imagining Ukrainian-Canadians, Dr. Rhonda Hinder. This is a collected work focussing upon the history of civilian internment in Canada. To this end we co-hosted and organized a panel at the 2014 CHA conference and more significantly, in the summer of 2015 hosted a three-day workshop/conference which drew over 100 participants, including survivors of various internment operations and their off-spring, as well as academic experts. The papers and transcriptions of session discussions have been edited and turned into a book-length manuscript for inclusion in University of Manitoba Press’s Human Rights and Social Justice Series. The completed book came out on February 19, 2020 and since then has been named the winner of the Manitoba Historical Society’s, “Margaret McWilliams Award,” Best Scholarly Book, 2020.

I have also recently completed work on another collected edition – this time based upon the essays presented at “Building a Better World: 1919-2019” – a four-day conference that I helped to organize in Winnipeg, Mb from May 8 to May 11, 2019. This conference brought together over 300 participants – consisting of academics, community organizers, labour activists, public historians and members of the community – to celebrate and examine the legacy of North America’s longest and most dramatic general strike. My co-editors are Dr. James Naylor and Dr. Rhonda Hinder, both of Brandon University. For a Better World: The Winnipeg General Strike and the Workers’ Revolt was released in fall, 2022. In 2023 it was shortlisted for the “Carol Shields Winnipeg Book Award.”

The final project which I have mapped out will be a broad-ranging examination of the relationship between humans and the environment in the Canadian mid-north. The working title for this project is Constructing the North: Nature and Humanity in the Sub-Arctic. This returns me to the field of northern studies, the subject of my second book, Formidable Heritage. However, it also signals a major shift in my interests towards the fields of environmental and First Nations History.

As these projects approach completion, I intend to take a different tack in my research. As a result of giving a paper on mine financing and technological innovation at a mining history conference, it was brought to my attention that my work on the Whitney family's involvement in mine financing is somewhat unique. (Part of this research is included in Formidable Heritage) In effect, no one has undertaken a scholarly analysis of the economic role played by this prominent New York family. As a result, I am conducting a preliminary search for materials on this family with an eye towards writing an economic and social biography of the family during the 19th and 20th centuries.

FIELDS OF ACADEMIC INTEREST AND EXPERTISE

My three Ph.D. candidacy fields were 19th and 20th century Canadian history, 19th century British history and American history, 1824-1920. Within all three fields my area of specialization was social/labour/economic history. In the Canadian field I was trained primarily by Gerry Friesen, J.E. Rea, Ross McCormack, John Milloy, Lovell Clark, and Jack Bumsted. Although not included in my candidacy fields, I also did graduate work in the history of popular radicalism, from the French Revolution to the present, and in Empire/Commonwealth history - under the direction of John Kende. At the Honours level I did course work on modern eastern European history, Canada’s First Nations history and 20th century American history.

I have taught a wide variety of classes on Canada's political, economic, social and labour history, as well as specifically western and northern Canadian courses, an interdisciplinary course in Canadian studies and comparative courses - at both the undergraduate and graduate levels - in Canadian and US history. I was also heavily involved in creating a minor in Canadian Studies at UND and co-developed and co-taught the programme's core pre-requisite course, "Introduction to Canadian Studies."

At UND I have been given the opportunity to expand my interest and expertise in various aspects of US History. In addition to teaching both halves of the US survey course, which I offer almost every semester, my graduate teaching load has expanded - under the title of North American studies - to include reading and research seminars in modern Canadian and US history, the graduate course in historiography and the undergraduate historiography and methods class. Unfortunately, owing to the University's decision to defund my department's graduate program this aspect of my work has ended.

Since 1996 I have successfully supervised twenty-three M.A. theses in the fields of North American economic, native, intellectual, labour, women's and western history as well as in British Imperial History. I have served on a total of forty-two other History MA theses (completed), usually as the second reader, plus three Doctor of Arts theses. I have also served as the second or third reader on four History Ph.D dissertation committees and as the outside member for ten Ph.D. committees in related fields (completed), and am presently serving in that capacity on one more Ph.D. committee in the Department of Educational Leadership, one in the Department of Music, one in the Department of Counselling Psychology, one in the Department of English and three in our own joint (UND-ND SU) Ph.D. programme as well as three Doctor of Arts projects.

Finally, I have also expanded our Department's offerings in British and British Imperial history. I have developed a two-course package on British Empire/Commonwealth history, which I offer at the upper division level. I have also developed another Upper Division course in English/British History which covers the social, political and economic history of the period stretching from the Tudors to the industrial revolution. I have also conducted a graduate seminar on British Social and Labour History.

ADMINISTRATIVE/SERVICE/PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

Leadership Roles:

Co-Organizer, "In the Spirit of 1919," – a day-long exploration of current issues facing Canadian workers and their families 100 years after Canada's most famous labour action. Ukrainian Labor Temple, Winnipeg, May 6, 2023.

Co-Chair, UND Strategic Planning Committee, 02/22 – 01/23.

Co-Organizer, "Building a Better World: 1919-2019" – a four-day conference held in Winnipeg, Mb (May 8-11, 2019). This conference brought together over 300 participants – consisting of academics, community organizers, labour activists, public historians and members of the community – to celebrate and examine the legacy of North America's longest and most dramatic general strike. Designed to examine the nature of working peoples' struggles in both the past and the present this conference featured a mix of academic presentations and roundtables featuring the work and struggles of contemporary activists. To facilitate this event over $150,000 was raised from a variety of funding agencies and institutions, including the Canadian Association for Work and Labour Studies, the Canadian Society for Ukrainian Labour Research, the Faculty of Arts, Brandon University, the Faculty of Arts, University of Manitoba, the Faculty of Arts, University of Winnipeg, the H. Sanford Riley Fellowship in Canadian History, the Manitoba Federation of Labour, the Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada, the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada, the University of Manitoba Faculty Association, and the Winnipeg Labour Council.

Co-Organizer, “Civilian internment in Canada: histories and legacies” – a three day workshop-conference, held in Winnipeg, Mb (June 17-19, 2015) This gathering brought together approximately 100 participants, survivors and presenters from all across Canada and Europe. In order to facilitate this event over $70,000 was raised from agencies such as SSHRC, the Canadian First World War Internment Recognition Fund, the Government of Manitoba Ethno cultural Support Program and several smaller funding agencies and bodies. The papers and transcriptions of session discussions were edited and turned into a book-length manuscript for inclusion in University of Manitoba Press’s Human Rights and Social Justice Series.
